Monks founded "cella in bisonzio" (Zelle im Pinzgau), as ordered by Salzburg's Archbishop Johannes, in 740 a.d. It was firstly documented in 743 a.d.. Zell am See is the oldest Bajuwaric (Bavarian) settlement in Pinzgau. The settlement was exhalted to a "market" in 1357 and due to the mining boom in Hirzbachtal and Limberg, it became a thriving community.

During the Peasants' War in 1525/26, the Zell community remained either neutral, or true to the Archbishop – for which they received privileges when making the yearly pilgrimage to the Salzburg Cathedral. After the Parish Church burnt down in 1559, the Rosenberger Guild built Schloss Rosenberg, the town hall and seat of municipal administration today.

"Zell am See" became its present name as late as 1810. Due to the efforts of Zell am See's most eminent mayor, Josef Salzmann, it has continued to be the seat of district administration since 1854 - with various administrative offices and positions located here. The railway opened on the 3rd July 1875. This connection to the main railway system marked the beginning of thriving tourism and the construction of the first large hotels.

In 1885 Emperor Franz Joseph I and Empress Elisabeth ("Sisi") visited Zell am See. The local Pinzgau railway was built in 1898, opening transport to and from Upper Pinzgau. The "von Trapp" family stayed the whole Summer, in Thumersbach, in 1900.

The first cable car in Zell am See was built on the local Schmittenhöhe mountain in 1927. Due to Zell am See's status as the "oldest settlement with German culture", it was exhalted to a municipal town, by the Salzburg state parliament, on the 24th January 1928.

A National Socialist mayor was already assigned to Zell am See in 1921. Soon afterwards the town square was renamed the Adolf-Hitler-Square. During the final year of World War II, Zell am See became a lazaret town and was considered to be the last bastion of the National Socialists. The town was generally spared from bombings during the war years and any that fell landed in the lake or on the Schmittenhöhe.

Zell am See fell into a depression at the beginning of the Occupation. However three town leaders managed to turn this around and lay the foundations for the flourishing tourism we see today. There was also a lot done for education after the war. A natural disaster hit Zell am See on the 12th June 1966 - after a two hour storm of rain and hail which sent the Schmitten stream raging over its banks and closing the roads with mud and debris.

Three large construction projects were completed in 2007: the Ferry Porsche Congress Center (the most modern building in town), a shopping centre and a new lift on the Schmittenhöhe.

Archaeological finds show evidence of Celtic mining on the Bürgerkogels (near the valley station of the Maiskogel cable car). This 150 m high rocky promontory was home to an Early Bronze Age fortified hilltop settlement – also inhabited in the Hallstatt and Latène periods. Archaeological investigations, between 1991 – 1993, show that settlement was very active in the late Latène period. Many finds, now in the Salzburg Museum Carolino Augustinum, show that there was trade with regions south of the Alps.

The signs of settlement ended with the Roman conquest of the Alps. The wall surrounding the Celtic settlement was largely destroyed by the building of a fortress wall in the 10th Century a.D.

Kaprun was first documented in 931 a.D. with the Celtic name Chataprunnin (wild water), in the Codex Odalberti. It was a mountain farming village for hundreds of years. In 1166, it was mentioned in the Codex Falkensteinensis that the Kaprun estates were in the possession of the Lords of Falkenstein-Neuburg.

The Kaprun Castle was built in the 12th Century and burnt to the ground in 1526 during the Peasants’ War. Soon afterwards it was reconstructed into its present form, with comprehensive and progressive renovations since 1984.

The construction of the Tauernkraftwerk (Tauern power station) began under the domination of the National Socialists. Jewish forced labourers were stationed in a camp in Kaprun. The village increased in prosperity after the completion of the Tauernkraftwerke in 1955. The Kitzsteinhorn was accessed, by a cable car built in three stages (between 1963 – 1965) to become Austria’s first glacial skiing area. The lift system has been continually enlarged and the skiing area considerably extended since then.

Take home the culinary memories of our region

„The source of Pinzgau’s specialties!“

- Ham, bacon and sausages made of beef, pork or game meat
- Wide variety of regional and international cheese
- Award winning premium wine, schnapps and liqueurs from Austrian producers
- Organic, local and pure honey from forests and flowers and high quality royal jelly
- Austria’s best chocolate & praline from Berger confectionery. Pure seduction!

AS IMPRESSIVE AS THE LAKE AND MOUNTAINS
A flexible and modern congress building right in the middle of Austria’s most popular holiday destinations: the Ferry Porsche Congress Center (FPCC) offers the ideal ambience even for events with the highest demands. Up to 1,000 visitors can be seated in the variably changeable rooms of the house which can be easily adapted to the requirements of small conventions as well as of major congresses.
Event guests benefit from the optimal accommodation and service in Zell am See. More than 2,200 guest beds are in walking distance to the Ferry Porsche Congress Center.
